

I am studying the responses of young adults who have been dubbed “no-sabo kids” in youth because I want to find out how failure to engage in the linguistic component in one's culture growing up can lead to psychological consequences in order to help my reader understand how the Spanish-speaking communities' value language.